Lurky Finds a Friend

Lurky was feeling unusually happy one day not long ago. Murky Dismal was busy concocting some Guinky Muck in his lab, and Lurky was free to do what he wanted. He'd finished all of his chores and was skipping through a field of flowers in Rainbow Land. Suddenly, the sound of happy voices drifted across the meadow. Lurky saw that the Color Kids and the sprites were having a picnic. He stood and looked longingly at them, hoping that they'd ask him to join them. "No one will ever like me..." he sighed. The flowers were so soft that they came all the way up to Lurky's chin and tickled him. He giggled, and then stopped in surprise. "Something has happened back!"

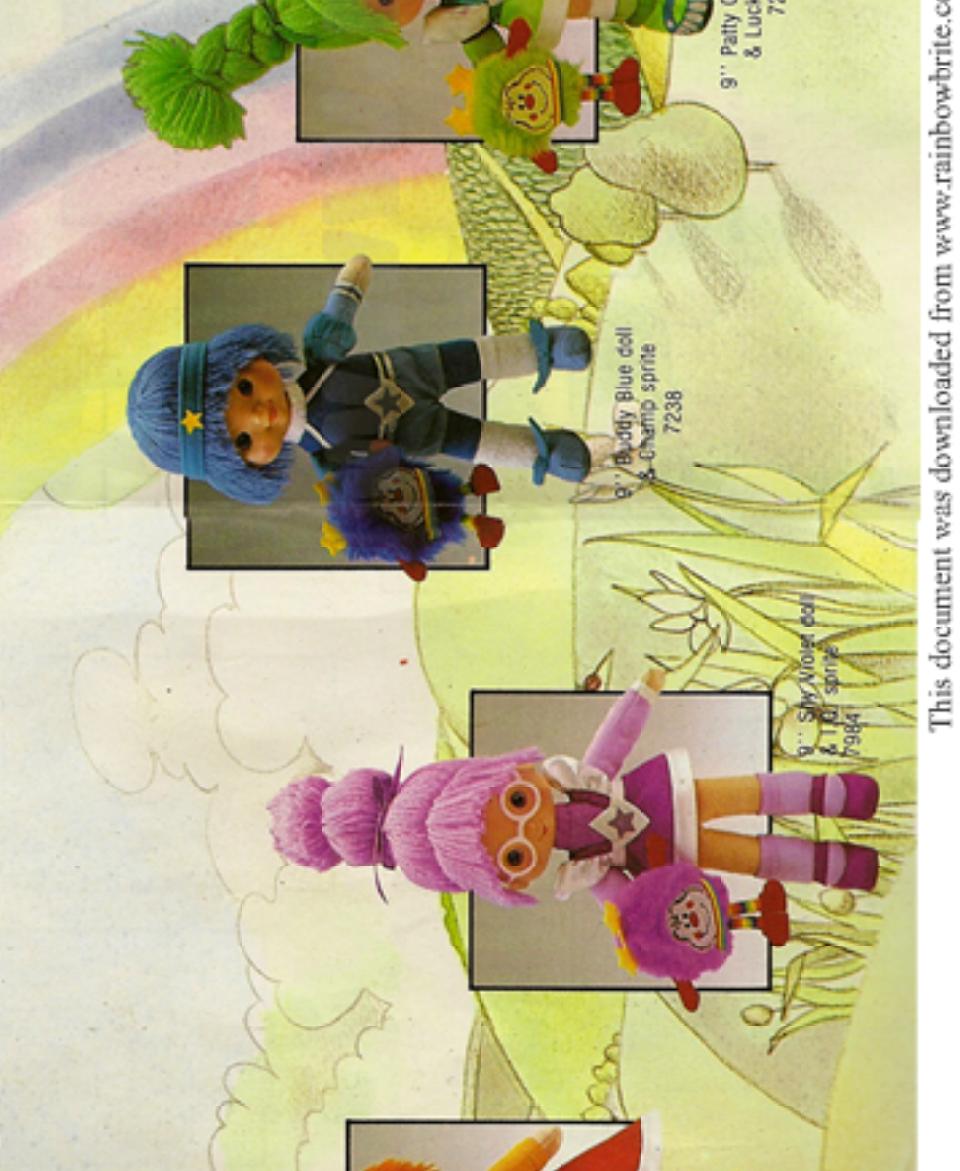

Turning around slowly, Lurky looked all around the meadow. There was no one in sight — just flowers blooming in the breeze. He stopped and waited on. Then he stopped again. "Something's following me! I just know it!" Lurky whimpered. He could hear the soft rustle of grass behind him as he walked. It stopped when he stopped. And it wasn't the wind — it was Me! "It's a Thing!" Lurky gasped. "And it's after me!" Lurky walked faster. The Thing walked faster, too. "It's after me!" Lurky cried. "Help!" And he ran off of the flowers, stumbling into the Color Kids' picnic. Red Buller stood up, not knowing what to make of this image of Lurky — so scared and shaken. "What thing? What's after you?" The other Color Kids huddled together to protect each other. "The Thing!" Lurky screamed. "The horrible, ugly Thing with big eyes and pointed teeth, and claws, and it's coming to eat me up..." Lurky suddenly broke off and stared at the Color Kids. They were laughing! He couldn't believe it! Lurky wheeled around, and his mouth dropped in surprise. The Thing that had followed Lurky, his moon, dropped in surprise. The Thing that had followed Lurky, wasn't a Thing at all, but a fluffy little puppy with all the colors of the rainbow in its fur! The puppy jumped into Lurky's arms and licked his big nose. "Now cut that out, you!" Lurky said, embarrassed about having been so scared. The Color Kids crowded around the two of them. "Aren't you lucky?" squeaked Patty O'Green. "To have a puppy as your very own! What a nice friend to have!" "A friend?" Lurky brightened. He shook his head sadly, then handed the puppy to Red Buller. "Here..." he said, "you take him. You guys can give him a much better home in Rainbow Land than I could give him down in the Pits. He needs sensible and colors. He needs sunlight and fresh air..." But Lurky..." Shy Violet said sorrowfully, "the puppy followed Lurky just now! His best friend again. "No, he's better off with Rainbow Drive. Just..." Then Lurky grabbed a tiny grin that made his big, sad face light up. "Just tell the little fellow stories about me so he doesn't forget me. Will you..." "We will," Lala said firmly, "and we'll all love him and make sure he's happy..." Let's call him Puppy Brite!" Patty O'Green chimed in. "He can guard Rainbow Land. He'll be our watchdog!" "Yeah!" Lurky yelled, not thinking that his friend Puppy Brite would be guarding the cage against his boss, Murky Dismal! "Let's show our new friend to Rainbow Castle." Red Buller suggested. And they all started out for the Color Castle. And Bark! And Bark! And Puppy Brite looked back and barked a farewell. Lurky smiled a big smile this time, the biggest, ever, because he knew his friend would be happy in the colorful world of Rainbow Land.
